The Short Skirted.

Formerly women wore clothes which left to surmise a great deal which is now open to discussion. There is nothing immoral or improper in short skirts. They were worn in Europe by the peasant girls hundreds of years ago, and are still worn by that class. The more seen of well turned ankles the less thought about them possibly, but the fashion of the day is just a trifle trying upon those who would not secure a first row position in a musical chorus.

The feminine foot is not alway: as small in fact as in poetry and fiction and family tradition. It is far better to let it have room. It is better for the health and the happiness of those underpinned by it, but short skirts do turn harsh uncompromising light upon the foot which is not small or well proportioned, and upon which the ankle is fat where it ought to be slender.

Powerful Exterminator.

In India and Australia a rat and rabbit exterminator was tested some time ago. It consists of an outer and inner metal shell, like one small egg in a larger one. In the outer shell is sulphuric acid, in the inner metal egg is dry cyanide of potash. The outer shell is filled with acid and placed in the rat hole or burrow, and all rat holes are tightly sealed. After an hour or so the acid eats into the cyanide and turns loose a lot of deadly prussic acid gas.

ERTY LOAN SUNDAY.

A signed letter from Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo now being sent to 14,000 clergymen throughout the country has requested April 21 to be officially and nationally observed as Liberty Loan Sunday.

There are about 41,000,000 members in continental United States, and these are looked after spiritually by these are looked after spiritually by more than 150,000 ministers. More and more it is becoming apparent to these churches that their very existence as free bodies moving within a free State, is one of the things at stake in this war.

The time has come for every American church, whose freedom to worship according to the dictates of conscience was bought with precious blood in the Revolutionary War, to line up with the American Government that has a second or the second of the sec ment that has assured and protected that liberty these 140 years or more. Secretary McAdoo is making his appeal as a God-fearing American to the pastors to bring their influence nationally speaking, to bear upon their flocks in the great drive now under way for the successful flota-tion of Third Liberty Bonds.

The Secretary has chosen a strategic time for a national Liberty Loan Sunday, which will be two weeks before the end of the National Liberty Loan campaign. It is just about that time in a campaign like the present one, when zealous people are likely to be overconfident and let up on their efforts to put the Third Liberty Loan over. The clergy are to be an imporatnt factor in urging their folk onward and upward in the good fight. They can devote entire sermon periods to the issue involved. They can get behind Liberty Committees in their parishes, to see that they have rounded up the slackers and laggards, showing them their Christian duty in the matter.

That Secretary McAdoo's letter will have its desired effect is a foregone conclusion.

MRS. GIBSON TELLS GRAPHIC STORY OF EXPERIENCE.

A magnificent audience greeted Mrs. Ida M. Gibson, Thursday night, at the Opera House.

Mrs. Gibson is widely known as a representative newspaper woman, and her "Confessions of a Wife" have been read with great interest. She is now a most enthusiastic worker in the Red Cross organization and spent the past winter in Europe studying war conditions from every possible standpoint. She says she is the only woman, or at least

Mrs. Gibson is a woman of wonderful personality, splendid physique and magnetism. She tells the story of her thrilling experience in a charmingly simple style, yet with great force and power. Her tailored cloth Red Cross costume with French cape is very attractive, and with it she wears strong boots and a close fitting hat with no ornament except a graceful tassel on the right and la croix rouge in front.

In her opening sentence Mrs. Gibson told her audience not to let any one make them think for one moment that we are not at war with the German people, for we are.

"You have been told that you are at war with the Kaiser, but I want to tell you you are at war with the German people who have been preparing for this for forty years; and not from Norton Infirmary, in Louis-only with those over there, but with ville, where she has been a patient the despicable Germans in America who are acting as spies.'

She said she had learned to believe "there is a Hell—as sure as Joseph's Hospital, in Lexington, God"-for she had seen it, in the pinched features of starving children, in the helpless look in the eyes of women, in the destruction of magnificent churches, treasures of art and wealth, in the horrors of trench life, in bursting shell and murderous bomb; and she had heard it in the infernal din of battle, the roar of guns and the moans of the wounded and dying.

The speaker graphically told of her difficult journey on foot, one dark night, to reach the trenches, dressed in riding breeches, heavy boots, a Sammy overcoat and tin hat, stum'ding over rocks and rough places, alliost falling into shell holes, she and her protectors finally reached the trenches. Here, while handing out soup from the soup kitchen to the soldiers a bomb exploded a few feet in front of the pletely torn away and while taking his bowl of soup suddenly crumpled up and died at Mrs. Gibson's feet. Another who was wounded in the hand and talking of "me petit fils."

Mrs. Gibson gave an interesting account of the "children's convoy"a long train of French orphans that arrived in Paris early one winter morning. The windows were filled with little faces and every child was shouting, "Vive la France!" They marched to the place provided for they will find that the Red Cross to them singing bravely, and when askday is one of the most potent, single ed about their fathers the answer agencies in Europe.—Francis B. invariably was "Il est morte," or "Il est la guerre." The speaker urged every woman to work for the Red Cross more earnestly than ever, either sewing, or knitting or making surgical dressings, adding with emphasis and truth that every woman who does not devote at least a portion of her time each week to this work is a SLACKER!

The speaker concluded her wonderful address with a glowing tribute to the American soldiers, complimenting them as being the cleanest, the strongest, the straightest and the manliest soldiers on the face of the earth, and said they would stick to their post just as long and just as bravely as the French or the

Mrs. Gibson has a son in France and closed with a pathetic yet brave quotation from one of his letters. Altogether the address was enjoyed as much as any that has been given in Paris. Hon. C. M. Thomas presided over the meeting, introducing the speaker and announcing the order of exercises. The invocation was pro-nounced by Rev. J. J. Rice, and music was furnished by an orchestra of five pieces, and the High School chorus, who sang "America," "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Over

There can be no peace with honor or safety to ourselves or to posterity, except a just peace, and there can and will be no other peace. Work for peace accomplishes nothing but the hampering of our effort, the delay of the real peace, and a greater toll of death of America's fighting men. Our duty is to war for a just and righteous peace, and to work or speak for any other peace is aid and comfort to Germany-injury and disloyalty to our boys in France.

Government First

Tremendor as is the present activity in the marshaling a men, food and munitions for one conduct of the war, the placing of the Bell system unqualifiedly at the disposal of the government has relieved one paramount factor of preparedness.

Every American who wants to help win this war should bear in mind that private service must give way to government service should emergencies require that everything be subordinated to the telephone demands of the army, the navy and other representatives of the government.

So when the increased business of fall and winter is reflected in your telephone service by a slowing down and by more frequent "busy" reports, remember that we are using every means at our command to keep our service up to its usual standard. Every available position at our switchboard is occupied and it is difficult to secure additional positions because Uncle Sam's requirements have reduced the available supply of material to the point where manufacturers cannot make a definite promise of delivery.

Here's how you can help. Use the telephone only for necessary calls, particularly during the busy hours of the day. Be patient when there is a delay. Be cheerful to the operator and if you have trouble call "COMPLAINT."

Quaker Courtship in Which Woman Frankly Expressed Herself as Favoring Brother of Wooer.

A few weeks ago the Youth's Comanion reported two or three strange and amusing courtships of New England tradition. A reader was moved to add another to the list-this time a Quaker one. In a small town, of which about half the population were Friends, two brothers, John and Josph, shared a farm that adjoined the property of Sarah, a spinster in early middle life. Both brothers in their outh had been obvious suitors for arah's hand; but they were slow and difident, and neither ever reached the point of proposing. Then an enterprising and audacious young woman, who belonged to "the world's people," omehow extracted a proposal from Joseph-or dispensed with one and married him. After several years of matrimony she died, leaving him with two little girls. As soon as propriety permitted he betook himself to his pinster neighbor's, and, according to local tradition, spoke thus:

"It is borne in upon me, Sarah, that thee would make an excellent wife." "I have no leading to contradict thee, Joseph," replied the lady demurely.

"Also, Sarah, I believe thee competent to be an admirable mother." "Thy judgment is to be respected, Joseph." "Thy housekeeping is well esteemed, Sarah. The women say there is no better housekeeper in the place."

"I am assured thee would not listen to light gossip, Joseph." "Then, Sarah, will thee marry me?"

"Nay, Joseph, I am not moved to consent. But-thee may repeat thy kind words about me to thy brother John if thee thinks best."

"So that thee will enter the family, Sarah, and care for the household, I care not by which door thee comes in. I have no further inclination toward the married state for foolish reasons!" "Whether my reasons are foolish or

REALLY MORE THAN NEEDED

Youngster Asked God to Send Nice Coel Rain and a Deluge Flooded Fields of the Southwest.

We were living in the Southwest, For weeks and months we had no rain, relates a writer in the Country Gentleman. Every day big, promising-looking clouds rolled up, broke apart from their draft board. Age for enand drifted away. Streams were dried up, vegetation was burning up and life was well-nigh unbearable to man and beast. From 12 to 18 inches of sand and dust covered the highways; gnats made life hideous; heat parched our skin and throats. Rain was the only relief, and rain we did not get. Every night at bedtime four-year-old Robert on bended knees by his little white bed asked God: "Please don't forget to send a nice, cool rain."

One day the big, black clouds rolled up as usual, but we noticed that they were all fringed with green. Pretty soon a big wind sprang up and leveled small houses and barns, broke down trees, scattered chickens, ducks, straw and haystacks all over the country. A big hall followed the wind, and then came rain-a perfect deluge! Streams rose clear out of their banks and the water came creeping over the fields and toward the houses and cattle pens; pretty soon it had flooded the yard and was nearly to the door.

Small Robert took a survey of the situation, and then in a small, frightened voice said: "Daddy, don't blame it all on me. God had ought to knowed a small kid like me didn't need such a awful big rain."

Some Old Children's Books.

John Newbury set the fashion of publishing juvenile story books about 1756, retaining Goldsmith and others to write them, and in the list of such publications it is somewhat startling to come across "Tom Jones" and "Joseph Andrews"-"abridged for the amusement of youth," it is true, but not at all in the direction one would expect, says the Boston Globe. There was, however, quite literally, powder in the jam, even with Newbury's publications. The worthy publisher was the proprietor of the famous Dr. James' Powder, and contrived to introduce ingenious references to this profitable sideline into his book. Thus in "Goody-Two-Shoes" the heroine's father dies miserably because "seized with a fever in a place where Dr. James' Powder was not to be had."

Use of Cement.

Cement was first put on the market in England. It was still being imported into this country in 1875. It was at this time that the use of Portland cement in the United States came into commercial prominence. When the product was first placed on the market in competition with that which was being imported from England and Germany, a good price was demanded. However, production in excess of demand soon resulted and it proved a big factor in the price cutting that fol-

GERMANY FURNISHES THE PROOF.

Every development since our entry into the war has justified and proved the wisdom, the imperative necessity of American's participation. Eevry German success and every German failure have shown how necessary to our own welfare and peace, how necessary to the safety and peace of the world the defeat of Germany is. Every foot of ground in blue, black, purple Germany has been forced to give up, and green, specially every foot of land she has seized; have demonstrated the absolute necessity of defeating that sinister, intolerable thing called Germanism.

Book by Salem Man, Long Dead, Has Become War Factor.

Young Officers of the United States Merchant Marine Are Poring Over "American Navigator," Famed as Sailor's Guide.

No American of today is exercising so potent an influence in the country's present extraordinary development in seagoing as Nathaniel Bowditch, who has been in his grave for more than eighty years, and whose name is unrec-

This book is known as the "American Practical Navigator." It is the guide of every keel that sails the Seven ors the world over as "Bowditch," or

"Bowditch's Epitome." With America's entry into the war, the demand for Bowditch's "Navigator" became so great that a special edition of the book was published to "My wife has suffered from rheu- meet it, by the United States hydroeditions had been as recently issued as in 1916, and also in 1914. > The increased demand for the book was caused chiefly by the stimulus given the study of navigation among young Americans by the training servyoung men to serve as officers on the ships of the new merchant marine.

Bowditch was called by his contemporaries "an intellectual prodigy." He has since been termed "the Ocean THE APRIL FARM AND FIRESIDE Pathfinder." On receipt of the news of his death, in 1836, vessels in the chief ports of the world half-masted their flags. His book was then said by one eulogist to be "in practical utility second to no work of man ever published."

> Of the personality of the man who achieved this great distinction very little is recalled today, in spite of the vital influence of his work in the present development of his country.

He was born in the old shipping town of Salem, Mass., in 1773. His people were poor, and he was obliged to leave school when but twelve, to serve in a ship chandler's shop.

There, while selling rope and marlinspikes, the youth fell in with men from far voyages. One was an old British sailor, who taught the lad navigation. Algebra so fascinated the boy he "could not sleep after a first glance at

It chanced that about this time a privateer came into Salem with the booty of a cruise that included a library of philosophical works, the property of Dr. Richard Kirwan, an Irish scientist, taken from a freighter captured off the Irish coast. The books were sold at auction, and bought by Salem citizens as the nucleus of a library. Young Bowditch had access to them, read them eagerly, and copied most of them for further use.

When twenty-two, Bowditch made his first voyage to sea, as captain's clerk on a Salem ship. He sailed nine years in all, one voyage being on the Astrea, the first American ship to visit Manila harbor.

Every man in the Astrea's crew soon learned they had a genius among them. Bowditch looked the scholar and devoted many hours a day to study. He made every man aboard a navigator, and it was said, each of them "could work a lunar observation as well as Sir Isaac Newton."

When not studying young Bowditch paced the deck in deep thought. At such times nobody spoke to him, knowing that in due course he would dash into his cabin to set down the results of his concentration, as he rarely failed

It is related that one day the ship was attacked by a privateer, and Bowditch was assigned to pass powder from the magazine. The gun crews got Paris Gas & Electric Co. no powder, and investigation showed Bowditch seated on a powder keg, working out a difficult problem on his

On arriving in Boston harbor from voyage in 1802, Bowditch attended the commencement at Harvard college, and was surprised to find himself named for an honorary degree as bachelor of arts, his work as an authority on navigation having won him recogni-

Retiring from the sea in 1804, Bow ditch became president of a fire insurance company. He declined professorships at Harvard, the Military academy at West Point and the University of Virginia. His life was devoted largely to perfecting his "Navigator," and to the translation from the French and annotation of La Place's "Celestial Mea collossal work on astronoing great erudition by the translator, but now known only to a few astronomers.
